DOMINO'S EMPLOYEE SCOOPS NATIONAL AWARD FOR DELIVERING MORE IN GLASGOW

Domino's Pizza manager Louise Bilton has scooped a national Delivering More award from Domino's Pizza at the company's recent awards ceremony that took place on Monday, May 23, at the ACC (Arena and Convention Centre) in Liverpool.

Domino's Delivering More award is given to a store or individual who has gone above and beyond in their commitment and enthusiasm to promote the brand, as well as recognising how important it is to make a connection with their local community. It is also about displaying passion and dedication to providing excellent customer service.

Louise shows passion for Domino's like no one else and her hard work and dedication to her customers has ensured she stood out among the rest. She understands the value of what it is to deliver more, displaying energy and enthusiasm in all she does. Her keen attitude to continually strive to be the best and go that extra mile for the customer has seen her devote time to school tours for primary and disadvantaged children, numerous charity events and working with the corporate PR team to create a charity pizza for Domino's national charity, Special Olympics Great Britain. Louise always has a smile on her face no matter how busy her store gets and without doubt her team are her biggest fans. She is without question an outstanding ambassador for the brand.

Louise Bilton, manager of Domino's Glasgow City store, said: "I am absolutely delighted to win this award. I was not expecting it and was very shocked to hear my name. I am so proud to be a Domino's Pizza manager, I love working for the brand, it is an exciting and vibrant company and you get out of it what you put in. Having fun in my store ensures my team and my customers are happy. My team are vitally important to me and I see this award as one for all of us."

Domino's Pizza's annual awards recognise the talents and hard work of the franchisees and in-store team members from the company's 672 stores in the UK and Ireland.
